I support the evidence submitted by Fèisean nan Gàidheal to the Education and Culture Committee in relation to the Education (Scotland) Bill and would ask the committee to consider amendments to the Bill, particularly section 11, to ensure parents who have demonstrated reasonable demand then have a right to Gaelic education for their children. As the Bill stands a process is guaranteed to parents who prove that reasonable demand exists for new provision but, without a duty being put on local authorities, there is no guarantee of any new Gaelic education provision being made.
