Dates of recess, dissolution, parliamentary years and recalls of Parliament

Published on 28 January 2025
by the authority of the Scottish Parliament

This Fact Sheet provides a list of the parliamentary years since 1999 as well as the dates when the Scottish Parliament has been in recess, dissolution or has been recalled.

A parliamentary year is a period, normally of 12 months, beginning on the date of the first meeting of the Scottish Parliament following a general election, and on each subsequent anniversary of that date within that session.

Recess is a period when the Parliament is not dissolved but is not meeting for a particular length of time. The dates of recesses are decided by the Parliament on a motion from the Parliamentary Bureau that has regard to Scottish school holidays (Standing Orders Rule 2.3).

Dissolution is the official term for the end of a session. The Presiding Officer determines the date when the Parliament is expected to be dissolved and members are notified of the date by the Clerk. Under the Scotland Act 1998 ordinary general elections are held on the first Thursday in May, every four years.

A recall occurs in the event of the Scottish Parliament reconvening when the Parliament is not sitting; this can be during term-time, dissolution or recess. Under Standing Orders Rule 2.2.10, the Presiding Officer ‘may convene the Parliament on other dates or at other times in an emergency.’
