Domestic abuse and in accessing support services. This includes women with NRPS.

Migrant women continue to face discrimination when seeking protection from domestic abuse. This is exacerbated by the NRPS. However, this programme will offer better outcomes for women and children in the longer term.

The scheme will be launched in September 2016, beginning with a meeting with the Home Office. The programme will be based in Glasgow, and will be delivered by the Scottish Women’s Action Group (SWAG) and the Scottish Women’s Aid Group (SWAG) to focus on the needs of women in asylum seeking.

Visa and Immigration (UKVI) has agreed to cover the rental costs of the refuge and a relocation allowance for women and children.

More details will be provided in the UKVI’s publication of the asylum seeker report. The Home Office guidance was published at the end of July this year.

In Scotland, the Scottish Parliament has agreed to support asylum seekers and those in insecure immigration status.
