

Note by the Clerk on the Scotland Act 1998 (Modification of Schedule 5) Order 2026 [draft]

Overview

1. At this meeting, the Committee will take evidence from the Cabinet Secretary for Health and Social Care and officials on the Scotland Act 1998 (Modification of Schedule 5) Order 2026 [draft] before debating a motion in the name of the Cabinet Secretary inviting the Committee to recommend approval of the instrument.
2. This is a draft Statutory Instrument (SI), which requires approval by resolution of the Parliament before it can become law. More information about the instrument is summarised below:

Title of instrument: [Scotland Act 1998 \(Modification of Schedule 5\) Order 2026 \[draft\]](#)

Laid under: Scotland Act 1998

Laid on: 17 December 2025

Procedure: Affirmative

Lead committee to report by: 10 February 2026

Commencement: If approved, the instrument comes into force on the day after it is made.

Procedure

3. Under the affirmative procedure, an instrument must be laid in draft and cannot be made (or come into force) unless it is approved by resolution of the Parliament. In this case, the instrument is required to be laid under affirmative procedure in both the Scottish Parliament and at the UK Parliament and then (if approved by both Parliaments) made at a meeting of the Privy Council (under Type A procedure as set out in Schedule 7 of the 1998 Act).
4. Once laid, the instrument is referred to:
  - the Delegated Powers and Law Reform (DPLR) Committee, for scrutiny on various technical grounds, and
  - a lead committee, whose remit includes the subject-matter of the instrument, for scrutiny on policy grounds.
5. The lead committee, taking account of any recommendations made by the DPLR Committee (or any other committee), must report within 40 days of the instrument being laid.

6. The normal practice is to have two agenda items when an affirmative instrument is considered by the lead committee:
  - an evidence session with the Minister and officials, followed by
  - a formal debate on a motion, lodged by the Minister, inviting the lead committee to recommend approval of the instrument.
7. Only MSPs may participate in the debate, which may not last for more than 90 minutes. If there is a division on the motion, only committee members may vote. If the motion is agreed to, it is for the Chamber to decide, at a later date, whether to approve the instrument

Delegated Powers and Law Reform Committee consideration

8. The DPLR Committee considered the instrument on 13 January 2026 and reported on it in its 6th Report, 2026. In relation to this instrument, the Committee agreed to write to the lead committee and the Scottish Government with further questions and to highlight that in addition to this Order, further subordinate legislation would also be expected in the UK Parliament in relation to the Bill, and that the approach proposed may result in some scrutiny challenges for the Scottish Parliament.
9. The DPLR Committee's letter to the Health, Social Care and Sport Committee concluded:

“The issues that you may wish to explore are:

- 1) “What factors are being taken into account in the choice of solution to the legislative competence issues the Scottish Government sees in the Bill, and, in particular, why are only some of the legislative competence issues the Scottish Government sees in the Bill being addressed by the section 30 Order, while others are being left to a section 104 Order, which this Parliament can't formally scrutinise?
- 2) “Are there other possible solutions that would involve greater scrutiny in the Scottish Parliament?
- 3) “What consideration is being given to those?
- 4) “How does the Scottish Government propose to keep the Scottish Parliament as involved and as informed as possible as these matters are further considered, including in relation to a section 104 Order process?”

Purpose of the instrument

10. The Order provides for a limited exception to the list of reserved matters in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998, in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisted dying. This is being made in the context of the Assisted Dying for Terminally Ill Adults (Scotland) Bill which is currently being considered by the Scottish Parliament.

11. This Order enables the Scottish Parliament (subject to certain limitations) to:

- confer a power on the Scottish Ministers, by way of subordinate legislation made with the agreement of the Secretary of State, to identify substances and devices for use in assisting a terminally ill adult to voluntarily end their own life,

- confer a power on the Secretary of State to regulate such substances and devices, by way of subordinate legislation.

12. As part of a more general update on legislative competence considerations in relation to the Assisted Dying for Terminally Ill Adults \(Scotland\) Bill, the Cabinet Secretary for Health and Social Care provided the following supplementary information about the contents of the Order:

“Subsequent discussion with the UK Government, taking into consideration the changes to the Bill during Committee’s Stage 2 considerations, mean that the section 30 Order also includes provision around medical devices, which may relate to the reserved matters of product standards, safety and liability (section C8 of schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998) and medicines, medical supplies and poisons (section J4 of Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998).”

13. The Policy Note accompanying the instrument is included in the annex. In relation to impact assessments, the Policy Note concludes:

“A full Impact Assessment has not been prepared for this instrument because this is a constitutional measure that concerns the conferral of legislative competence on the Scottish Parliament.”

Evidence received

14. To support its scrutiny, the Health, Social Care and Sport Committee wrote to selected stakeholders with a request for written comments on the instrument and received three responses.

15. In its response, the Faculty of Advocates concluded that the Order appeared workable and that it was content with it.

16. In its response, the General Pharmaceutical Council reiterated its general position on assisted dying and its role as a regulator for the pharmacy profession.

17. In its response, the Law Society of Scotland raised concerns that “the Section 30 order is very narrowly framed, both in terms of its time-limited nature, and the requirement that regulations made by the Scottish Ministers obtain the consent of the Secretary of State”; that “The requirement for Secretary of State consent to Scottish regulations raises questions of precedent”; around conferral of functions and constitutional considerations; and that “the rationale for dealing with some issues via a Section 30 order and others via a Section 104 order, remains unclear”.

18. The Committee also wrote to Liam McArthur in his capacity as the Member in charge of the Assisted Dying for Terminally Ill Adults (Scotland) Bill to request his written views on the instrument. In his response, Mr McArthur concluded:

“I encourage all members to support this draft Order, as it will, if agreed by both parliaments, help to ensure that our Parliament can fully debate the Bill and proposed amendments at stage 3, and vote on whether to pass the Bill, with the knowledge that, if passed, the Scottish Parliament will have the necessary powers to give full effect to the end-of-life process in the Bill. The draft Order, if passed, will ensure that Scottish

Ministers will be able to regulate to approve from a range of substances and medical devices for use in assisted dying.”

Report

19. A draft report has been pre-prepared and is circulated separately, as a private paper, for consideration later in the meeting.

Part One: Explanation, and context, of the Instrument

4. Overview of the Instrument

What does the legislation do?

- 4.1 Schedule 5 to the Scotland Act 1998 lists the matters that are reserved to the UK Parliament. This Order will amend Part 3 of Schedule 5 to provide a time limited exception to reserved matters in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisting terminally ill adults to voluntarily end their own lives (hereafter referred to as 'assisted dying'). This exception will apply to provision so long as it is contained in an Act of the Scottish Parliament that originates from a Bill passed on or before 7 May 2026.
- 4.2 Specifically, the Order provides that the Scottish Parliament may competently confer powers on the Scottish Ministers to identify substances and devices for use in assisted dying, provided this is done by way of subordinate legislation made with the agreement of the Secretary of State. Furthermore, the Order provides that the Scottish Parliament may competently confer powers on the Secretary of State to regulate such substances and devices, by subordinate legislation. Any conferral of power on the Secretary of State to make subordinate legislation may not be made conditional upon the agreement of any person, including the Scottish Ministers, nor can any duties be imposed on the Secretary of State. In conferring powers to make subordinate legislation on the Scottish Ministers or Secretary of State, the Scottish Parliament may not mandate or restrict the content of such legislation, or the period within which such subordinate legislation may be made, or as the case may be, agreed to by the Secretary of State. However, the Scottish Parliament is not prevented from making provision with respect to the Parliamentary processes which are to apply to any subordinate legislation.

4.3 This is a technical and time-limited action which is being taken to enable the Scottish Parliament to further consider legislation on assisted dying, in its current Parliamentary session, with an understanding of how matters relating to the identification and regulation of substances and devices to be used within an assisted dying service can be addressed. These matters have been identified as matters which are currently outside the competence of the Scottish Parliament.

Where does the legislation extend to, and apply?

4.4 The extent of this instrument (that is, the jurisdiction(s) which the instrument forms part of the law of) is the United Kingdom.

4.5 The territorial application of this instrument (that is, where the instrument produces a practical effect) is the United Kingdom.

5. Policy Context

What is being done and why?

5.1 A Bill on assisted dying is currently before the Scottish Parliament. The Assisted Dying for Terminally Ill Adults (Scotland) Bill (“the Bill”) is a Member’s Bill, which was introduced by Liam McArthur MSP (Liberal Democrats) in March 2024, and passed the Stage 1 vote in the Scottish Parliament in May 2025. As introduced, the Bill would allow terminally ill adults, in Scotland, to lawfully request, and be provided with, assistance by health professionals to end their own life.

5.2 Section 29 of the Scotland Act 1998 provides that a provision of an Act of the Scottish Parliament is outside the competence of the Scottish Parliament, and so not law, if it relates to reserved matters. The UK Government and the Scottish Government consider that provision which allows for the identification and regulation of substances approved for use in an assisted dying service would relate to the reserved matter of medicines, medical supplies and poisons (section J4 of Schedule 5 to the Scotland Act 1998). The Bill currently before the Scottish Parliament contains such provision, in that it seeks to confer powers on the Scottish Ministers to specify substances approved for use in an assisted dying service. Similarly, both Governments agree that the identification and regulation of devices which may be used in the administration of such substances is also reserved and therefore, currently outside the competence of the Scottish Parliament.<sup>1</sup> The Bill currently before the Scottish Parliament would allow for the use of medical devices in the administration of substances.

<sup>1</sup> The identification and regulation of medical devices may relate to the reserved matters of product standards, safety and liability (section C8 of Schedule 5 to the Scotland Act 1998) and medicines, medical supplies and poisons (section J4 of Schedule 5 to the Scotland Act 1998).

5.3 The Scottish Government requested the UK Government agree to take legislative action to address this competence concern. The UK and Scottish Governments agree that the decision on whether to introduce assisted dying in Scotland is a matter for the Scottish Parliament. Both Governments recognise matters concerning substances and devices interact with reserved matters. The reserved consequences of an Act of the Scottish Parliament are often dealt with by way of consequential subordinate legislation under section 104 of the Scotland Act 1998. However, following discussions with the Scottish Government, the UK Government has agreed to make a limited, technical change to the Scotland Act 1998 by way of an order under section 30 of the Scotland Act 1998. This action will allow Members of the Scottish Parliament to further consider the Bill with clarity as to how the matter of substances and devices, which may be used for assisted dying in Scotland, could be dealt with.

5.4 The Scottish Parliament will be enabled to confer powers to make regulations with respect to substances and devices. These powers can either be conferred on the Scottish Ministers, with the Secretary of State's agreement, or on the Secretary of State, depending on their purpose. The limited nature of this approach means that the Scottish Parliament is given the power needed to create an overall framework for the use of substances and devices in assisted dying. This approach would allow UK Ministers to maintain an appropriate role in the matter, in recognition of the need to maintain consistency for regulation of medicines and devices across the UK. This Order is being taken forward in recognition that both Governments are neutral on the matter of assisted dying and the understanding that whether to make such provision remains a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

5.5 The Scottish Parliament is due to be dissolved in April 2026 ahead of the Scottish Parliament elections in May 2026. This change to the Scotland Act 1998 is being made on a time-limited basis for the purposes of the Scottish Parliament considering the Bill prior to dissolution.

What was the previous policy, how is this different?

5.6 Whilst the UK and Scottish Governments are neutral on the policy of assisted dying, considering it to be a matter of conscience for the respective Parliaments to decide, the Governments recognise that legislation on assisted dying would likely involve the Scottish Parliament considering the identification and regulation of substances which may be used as part of the process of assisting terminally ill adults, who are eligible, in Scotland to end their own lives. However, the Governments agree that, currently, the Scottish Parliament cannot competently make provision in that regard due to it relating to reserved matters. The same is also the case with respect to devices.

5.7 The difference, as a consequence of this Order, is that the Scottish Parliament will have competence to make particular provision in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisted dying, on a narrow and time-limited basis.

6. Legislative and Legal Context

How has the law changed?

- 6.1 The Scottish Parliament does not have the competence to make provision which relates to reserved matters. Schedule 5 to of the Scotland Act 1998, and specifically section J4, reserves the matter of medicines, medical supplies and poisons, which includes the subject matter of the Medicines Act 1968. Any provision that relates to this matter, or any other reservation, is outside the competence of the Scottish Parliament. It is a matter of agreement between the UK and Scottish Governments that it is outside the legislative competence of the Scottish Parliament to make provision in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisted dying as such provision would relate to the reserved matters of product standards, safety and liability (section C8 of Schedule 5), and medicines, medical supplies and poisons (section J4 of Schedule 5).
- 6.2 This Order provides for a limited exception to the list of reserved matters in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998 in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisted dying. This exception will allow the Scottish Parliament to competently make provision in that regard, subject to certain requirements.
- 6.3 Following this Order, the Scottish Parliament will be able to:
  - confer a power on the Scottish Ministers to identify substances and devices for use in assisting a terminally ill adult to voluntarily end their own life, by way of subordinate legislation. Such subordinate legislation must be made with the agreement of the Secretary of State.
  - confer a power on the Secretary of State to regulate such substances and devices. The exception does not allow the Scottish Parliament to make any subordinate legislation made by the Secretary of State conditional upon the agreement of any person, including the Scottish Ministers nor does it allow for the imposition of any duties on the Secretary of State.
- 6.4 In conferring such powers to make subordinate legislation, the Scottish Parliament will not be able to mandate or restrict the content of the subordinate legislation or the period within which such subordinate legislation may be made, or as the case may be, agreed to by the Secretary of State. However, the Scottish Parliament will be able to make provision with respect to the Parliamentary processes which are to apply to any subordinate legislation.
- 6.5 Finally, the exception being inserted into Schedule 5 contains a sunset clause such that the Scottish Parliament will only have the legislative competence to make provision if it is contained in an Act of the Scottish Parliament resulting from a Bill passed before 7 May 2026. In other words, the Scottish Parliament will have the competence to pass a Bill in its current Parliamentary session only.
- 6.6 This change to Schedule 5 to the Scotland Act 1998 is being made in the context of the Assisted Dying for Terminally Ill Adults (Scotland) Bill which is currently being considered by the Scottish Parliament and in recognition of the neutral position of both Governments on the matter of assisted dying. The limited and technical nature of the exception to the list of reservations in Schedule 5 is in recognition of the need for continued alignment across the UK in respect of the regulation of medicines and devices.

Why was this approach taken to change the law?

- 6.7 Both the UK Government and Scottish Government are neutral on the matter of assisted dying, considering it a matter for respective Parliaments. Both Governments recognise it is a complex policy with strong views on both sides of the debate.
- 6.8 The reserved consequences of an Act of the Scottish Parliament are often dealt with by way of subordinate consequential legislation under section 104 of the Scotland Act 1998. Section 104 Orders are a form of subordinate legislation scrutinised by the UK Parliament and, in relation to Scottish Parliament Bills, they can only be made after a Bill receives Royal Assent. However, the UK Government and Scottish Government have agreed to introduce a limited and technical Section 30 Order under the Scotland Act 1998 because this dual Parliament order aims to provide the Scottish Parliament with the necessary power to legislate on the identification and regulation of substances and devices used in assisted dying, solely for the purposes of allowing the Scottish Parliament to scrutinise the Bill currently before it. This change is designed to retain the overall integrity of the UK-wide regimes in respect of medicines and medical devices, while allowing the Scottish Parliament to consider whether it wishes to pass legislation which seeks to introduce assisted dying in Scotland, with the understanding of how these matters, which are considered outside of competence, will be handled.

7 Consultation

Summary of consultation outcome and methodology

- 7.1 No consultation has been carried out in relation to this Order. However, all amendments contained in this Order have the approval of the relevant UK Government departments and the Scottish Government.

8. Applicable Guidance

- 8.1 This instrument does not contain applicable guidance.

Part Two: Impact and the Better Regulation Framework

9. Impact Assessment

- 9.1 A full Impact Assessment has not been prepared for this instrument because this is a constitutional measure that concerns the conferral of legislative competence on the Scottish Parliament.

Impact on businesses, charities and voluntary bodies

- 9.2 There is no, or no significant, impact on business, charities or voluntary bodies.
- 9.3 The legislation does not impact small or micro businesses.
- 9.4 There is no, or no significant, impact on the public sector.

10. Monitoring and review

What is the approach to monitoring and reviewing this legislation?

10.1 As the purpose of this Order is to amend the legislative competence of the Scottish Parliament, no monitoring or review of the effects of this Order are required by the UK Government. It is for the Scottish Parliament to consider how best to monitor and review legislation within its legislative competence. Any secondary legislation introduced as a consequence of legislation in the Scottish Parliament will be scrutinised in the normal way.

Part Three: Statements and Matters of Particular Interest to Parliament

11. Matters of special interest to Parliament

11.1 In taking forward this Order the UK Government is clear that the decision on whether to amend, approve or otherwise consider legislation that is before the Scottish Parliament is a matter for the Scottish Parliament. This is a dual Parliament order made under Section 30 of the Scotland Act 1998 and therefore requires the approval of both the UK and Scottish Parliaments.

12. European Convention on Human Rights

12.1 The Secretary of State has made the following statement regarding Human Rights: "In my view the provisions of the Scotland Act 1998 (Modification of Schedule 5) Order 2026 are compatible with the Convention rights."

13. The Relevant European Union Acts

13.1 This instrument is not made under the European Union (Withdrawal) Act 2018, the European Union (Future Relationship) Act 2020 or the Retained EU Law (Revocation and Reform) Act 2023 ("relevant European Union Acts").

Scottish Government Policy Note

POLICY NOTE

THE SCOTLAND ACT (MODIFICATION OF SCHEDULE 5) ORDER 2026

SI 2026/XXX

The above instrument was made by His Majesty, in exercise of the power conferred on Him by section 30(2) of the Scotland Act 1998 ("the 1998 Act") at the Court at Buckingham Palace, on [ ] 2026. The instrument is required to be laid under affirmative procedure in both the Scottish Parliament and at the UK Parliament and then made at a meeting of the Privy Council (under Type A procedure as set out in Schedule 7 of the 1998 Act).

Summary Box

This Order provides for a limited exception to the list of reserved matters in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998 in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisted dying. This is being made in the context of the Assisted Dying for Terminally Ill Adults (Scotland) Bill which is currently being considered by the Scottish Parliament.

This Order enables the Scottish Parliament (subject to certain limitations) to:

- confer a power on the Scottish Ministers, by way of subordinate legislation made with the agreement of the Secretary of State, to identify substances and devices for use in assisting a terminally ill adult to voluntarily end their own life,
- confer a power on the Secretary of State to regulate such substances and devices, by way of subordinate legislation.

Overview of the Instrument

Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998 lists the matters that are reserved to the UK Parliament. This Order will amend Part 3 of Schedule 5 to provide a time limited exception to reserved matters in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisting terminally ill adults to voluntarily end their own lives (hereafter referred to as 'assisted dying'). This exception will apply to provision so long as it is contained in an Act of the Scottish Parliament that originates from a Bill passed on or before 7 May 2026. This is a dual Parliament order made under Section 30 of the Scotland Act 1998 and therefore requires the approval of both the UK and Scottish Parliaments.

Specifically, the Order provides that the Scottish Parliament may competently confer powers on the Scottish Ministers to identify substances and devices for use in assisted dying, provided this is done by way of subordinate legislation made with the agreement of the Secretary of State. Furthermore, the Order provides that the Scottish Parliament may competently confer powers on the Secretary of State to regulate such substances and devices, by subordinate legislation. Any conferral of power on the Secretary of State to make subordinate legislation may not be made conditional upon the agreement of any person, including the Scottish Ministers, nor can any duties be imposed on the Secretary of State. In conferring powers to make subordinate legislation on the Scottish Ministers or Secretary of State, the Scottish Parliament may not mandate or restrict the content of such legislation, or the period within which such subordinate legislation may be made, or as the case may be, agreed to by the Secretary of State. However, the Scottish Parliament is not prevented from making provision with respect to the Parliamentary processes which are to apply to any subordinate legislation.

This is a technical and time-limited action which is being taken to enable the Scottish Parliament to further consider legislation on assisted dying, in its current Parliamentary session, with an understanding of how matters relating to the identification and regulation of substances and devices to be used within an assisted dying service can be addressed. These matters have been identified as matters which are currently outside the competence of the Scottish Parliament.

The extent of this instrument (that is, the jurisdiction(s) which the instrument forms part of the law of) is the United Kingdom.

The territorial application of this instrument (that is, where the instrument produces a practical effect) is the United Kingdom.

Policy Objectives

A Bill on assisted dying is currently before the Scottish Parliament. The Assisted Dying for Terminally Ill Adults (Scotland) Bill ("the Bill") is a Member's Bill, which was introduced by Liam McArthur MSP (Liberal Democrats) in March 2024, and passed the Stage 1 vote in the Scottish Parliament in May 2025. As introduced, the Bill would allow terminally ill adults, in Scotland, to lawfully request, and be provided with, assistance by health professionals to end their own life.

Section 29 of the Scotland Act 1998 provides that a provision of an Act of the Scottish Parliament is outside the competence of the Scottish Parliament, and so not law, if it relates to reserved matters. The UK Government and the Scottish Government consider that provision which allows for the identification and regulation of substances approved for use in an assisted dying service would relate to the reserved matter of medicines, medical supplies and poisons (section J4 of Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998). The Bill currently before the Scottish Parliament contains such provision, in that it seeks to confer powers on the Scottish Ministers to specify substances approved for use in an assisted dying service. Similarly, both Governments agree that the identification and regulation of devices which may be used in the administration of such substances is also reserved and therefore, currently outside the competence of the Scottish Parliament<sup>2</sup>. The Bill currently before the Scottish Parliament would allow for the use of medical devices in the administration of substances.

The Scottish Government requested the UK Government agree to take legislative action to address this competence concern. The UK and Scottish Governments agree that the decision on whether to introduce assisted dying in Scotland is a matter for the Scottish Parliament. Both Governments recognise matters concerning substances and devices interact with reserved matters. The reserved consequences of an Act of the Scottish Parliament are often dealt with by way of consequential subordinate legislation under section 104 of the Scotland Act 1998. However, following discussions with the Scottish Government, the UK Government has agreed to make a limited, technical change to the Scotland Act 1998 by way of an order under section 30 of the Scotland Act 1998. This action will allow Members of the Scottish Parliament to further consider the Bill with clarity as to how the matter of substances and devices, which may be used for assisted dying in Scotland, could be dealt with.

The Scottish Parliament will be enabled to confer powers to make regulations with respect to substances and devices. These powers can either be conferred on the Scottish Ministers, with the Secretary of State's agreement, or on the Secretary of State, depending on their purpose. The limited nature of this approach means that the Scottish Parliament is given the power needed to create an overall framework for the use of substances and devices in assisted dying. This approach would allow UK Ministers to maintain an appropriate role in the matter, in recognition of the need to maintain consistency for regulation of medicines and devices across the UK. This Order is being taken forward in recognition that both Governments are neutral on the matter of assisted dying and the understanding that whether to make such provision remains a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

The Scottish Parliament is due to be dissolved in April 2026 ahead of the Scottish Parliament elections in May 2026. This change to the Scotland Act 1998 is being made on a time-limited basis for the purposes of the Scottish Parliament considering the Bill prior to dissolution.

Whilst the UK and Scottish Governments are neutral on the policy of assisted dying, considering it to be a matter of conscience for the respective Parliaments to decide, the Governments recognise that legislation on assisted dying would likely involve the Scottish Parliament considering the identification and regulation of substances which may be used as part of the process of assisting terminally ill adults, who are eligible, in Scotland to end their own lives. However, the Governments agree that, currently, the Scottish Parliament cannot competently make provision in that regard due to it relating to reserved matters. The same is also the case with respect to devices.

The difference, as a consequence of this Order, is that the Scottish Parliament will have competence to make particular provision in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisted dying, on a narrow and time-limited basis.

Legislative and legal context

The Scottish Parliament does not have the competence to make provision which relates to reserved matters. Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998, and specifically section J4, reserves the matter of medicines, medical supplies and poisons, which includes the subject matter of the Medicines Act 1968. Any provision that relates to this matter, or any other reservation, is outside the competence of the Scottish Parliament. It is a matter of agreement between the UK and Scottish Governments that it is outside the legislative competence of the Scottish Parliament to make provision in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisted dying as such provision would relate to the reserved matters of product standards, safety and liability (section C8 of Schedule 5), and medicines, medical supplies and poisons (section J4 of Schedule 5).

This Order provides for a limited exception to the list of reserved matters in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998 in respect of the identification and regulation of substances and devices for use in assisted dying. This exception will allow the Scottish Parliament to competently make provision in that regard, subject to certain requirements.

Following this Order, the Scottish Parliament will be able to:

- confer a power on the Scottish Ministers to identify substances and devices for use in assisting a terminally ill adult to voluntarily end their own life, by way of subordinate legislation. Such subordinate legislation must be made with the agreement of the Secretary of State.
- confer a power on the Secretary of State to regulate such substances and devices. The exception does not allow the Scottish Parliament to make any subordinate legislation made by the Secretary of State conditional upon the agreement of any person, including the Scottish Ministers nor does it allow for the imposition of any duties on the Secretary of State.

In conferring such powers to make subordinate legislation, the Scottish Parliament will not be able to mandate or restrict the content of the subordinate legislation or the period within which such subordinate legislation may be made, or as the case may be, agreed to by the Secretary of State. However, the Scottish Parliament will be able to make provision with respect to the Parliamentary processes which are to apply to any subordinate legislation.

Finally, the exception being inserted into Schedule 5 contains a sunset clause such that the Scottish Parliament will only have the legislative competence to make provision if it is contained in an Act of the Scottish Parliament resulting from a Bill passed before 7 May 2026. In other words, the Scottish Parliament will have the competence to pass a Bill in its current Parliamentary session only.

This change to Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998 is being made in the context of the Assisted Dying for Terminally Ill Adults (Scotland) Bill which is currently being considered by the Scottish Parliament and in recognition of the neutral position of both Governments on the matter of assisted dying. The limited and technical nature of the exception to the list of reservations in Schedule 5 is in recognition of the need for continued alignment across the UK in respect of the regulation of medicines and devices.

Both the UK Government and Scottish Government are neutral on the matter of assisted dying, considering it a matter for respective Parliaments. Both Governments recognise it is a complex policy with strong views on both sides of the debate.

The UK and Scottish Governments have agreed to introduce a limited and technical Section 30 Order under the Scotland Act 1998. This dual Parliament order aims to provide the Scottish Parliament with the necessary power to legislate on the identification and regulation of substances and devices used in assisted dying, solely for the purposes of allowing the Scottish Parliament to scrutinise the Bill currently before it. This change is designed to retain the overall integrity of the UK-wide regimes in respect of medicines and medical devices, while allowing the Scottish Parliament to consider whether it wishes to pass legislation which seeks to introduce assisted dying in Scotland, with the understanding of how these matters, which are considered outside of competence, will be handled.

EU Alignment Consideration

This instrument is not relevant to the Scottish Government's policy to maintain alignment with the EU.

Consultation

Although there has been no general consultation specific to this Order, the Order has been agreed by all the relevant departments within the UK Government and the Scottish Government.

Impact Assessments

A full Impact Assessment has not been prepared for this instrument because this is a constitutional measure that concerns the conferral of legislative competence on the Scottish Parliament.

Financial Effects

The Cabinet Secretary for Health and Social Care confirms that no BRIA is necessary as the instrument has no financial effects on the Scottish Government, local government or on business.
